This prompt mentions two reference images (the finished plate, then the pulled chicken). They were not kept for this take; generate them first or run the prompt without them.

Create a 30-second fast-paced photoreal cinematic cooking film showing the preparation of authentic chicken dum biryani. Shot like a high-end macro food commercial. Not animated.

REFERENCE IMAGE

The first reference image shows only the finished plate and open pot. It fixes how the food and heaped brass plate look from 26s on, and the copper of the handi. Do not open on it and do not show the finished dish before 23s.
The second reference image shows the chicken only when the pull has finished, at about 29s. Until then the chicken on the plate is whole, on its bone.

STYLE

Photoreal, warm summer window light, ultra-detailed food textures, visible steam and moisture, shallow depth of field, macro close-ups, smooth camera movement that never stops, warm Indian home kitchen. Everything happens on one dark wood counter, with a gas ring and a shallow iron tray of coals standing on it. Fast rhythmic editing with match cuts on movement and shape. Only hands and bare forearms ever enter the picture, from its edges.

The handi is one heavy copper pot with one copper lid. The rice pot and bowls are plain unmarked steel.

TIMELINE

0-2.5s - Marinate
Close-up. Both hands rub thick yogurt, red chili, turmeric and crushed ginger-garlic into raw bone-in chicken pieces in a steel bowl. Fingers squeeze hard and the raw meat stays tight on its bone. Crisp rhythmic squeezes from the very first frame.

2.5-5s - Fry the Onions
Thin half-moon onion slivers in clear amber ghee in a wide pan. One unbroken shot, no cut: a slotted spoon in a hand turns them as they go from pale gold to deep crisp brown.

5-7.5s - Sear
On the gas ring, tongs in a hand lower marinated chicken pieces into the hot copper handi. The masala sizzles and darkens around them.

7.5-9.5s - Boil the Rice
Medium shot, hand and bowl in frame. A hand tips a steel bowl of long grains into the plain steel pot on the gas ring, where cardamom, cloves and a bay leaf already turn in the boiling water.

9.5-12.5s - Layer
Spoon after spoon of parboiled white rice slides off a slotted spoon in a hand over the chicken in the handi, until the chicken is covered and the pot is nearly full. A second hand then scatters the fried onions and mint over it.

12.5-14.5s - Saffron
A hand tips a small brass spoon and thin saffron milk runs off its lip. Orange streaks spread from where it touches the white rice.

14.5-16.5s - Seal on the Coals
The handi now stands on the iron tray of low glowing charcoal, a rope of wheat dough already round its rim, the rice still showing inside. Framed on the rim, both hands and the coals glowing below. They lower the copper lid into the dough and press it down in one move. The rice is gone from sight and the dough bulges out along the edge.

16.5-19s - The Wait
Same framing, one continuous shot, no edit. The dough browns and hardens, and a thin wisp of steam escapes from the seal. One hand comes in, whole hand and wrist in the picture, stops a finger's width above the lid, then draws back without touching it.

19-22s - Crack the Seal
The dough is baked hard and brown. One continuous shot, no edit, framed from the rim down to the tray, whole knife and hand in the picture. The back of the blade strikes the baked ring, twice. Where it lands the ring cracks like hard biscuit, the crack runs right round the rim, and chunks drop onto the tray.

22-24s - Lift the Lid
Both hands lift the lid straight up with a folded cloth. A thick column of steam billows up and clears, showing saffron-streaked white rice with brown onions and green mint on top, as they were when it was sealed.

24-26s - Serve
A hand holds the brass plate beside the open handi. A large spoon in the other hand tips a heavy load of rice onto it, one chicken piece on top, heaped as in the reference image.

26-29s - The Pull
The plate on the bare counter, so close that only the plate is in frame, the chicken whole on its bone, a third of the frame. One continuous shot, no edit, starting before anything tears. Two fingers of the left hand pin the bare end of the bone to the plate. The right hand grips the meat and pulls it slowly away from the bone for the whole beat: the meat tears in short shreds, dark masala crust outside, short white shredded fibres inside, like pulled roast chicken. At the end the right hand simply opens, the torn meat drops beside the bare bone, and it stays there, torn.

29-30s - Raita
The torn meat and bare bone lie where they fell. A hand tips a small spoon of thin raita over the rice beside them. The film ends as it starts to run, with the camera still moving.

AUDIO

Bright 1980s-inspired Bollywood disco-funk instrumental, 110-120 BPM, with subtle sitar and light tabla percussion. The music drops out during The Wait, only coals ticking, and comes back on the first crack. Synchronize realistic ASMR cooking sounds: wet marinade squeezes, onion sizzle, searing, rice pouring, dough cracking, steam.

End with one delicate brass bell tone during the raita pour.
