Create a 30-second fast-paced photoreal cinematic vertical 9:16 cooking film showing the preparation of authentic katsudon. Real food, real hands, real Japanese kitchen, shot like a high-end macro food commercial, each macro composed for a tall frame. Not animated.

STYLE

Photoreal, warm summer window light, ultra-detailed food textures, realistic cooking physics, visible steam and moisture, shallow depth of field, macro close-ups, smooth camera movement, warm Japanese kitchen atmosphere. Fast rhythmic editing with natural match cuts based on movement, shape, texture, and composition.

LOCKED (these never change)

1 pork cutlet, which becomes exactly 5 strips. Thin half-moon onion slices, never rings. 1 deep pot for the oil. 1 shallow pan for the dashi. 1 small white bowl of beaten egg for the pour. 1 blue-and-white donburi bowl, the only rice bowl. One cook only: one left hand and one right hand, the same bare forearms in every shot. No object or food ever moves unless a named hand is moving it or it is falling under gravity from a vessel that hand is holding.

TIMELINE

0-2.5s - Prepare Pork
Close-up. The right hand pounds a thick pork loin with a wooden mallet on a cutting board. The meat gradually flattens and its fibers loosen. The left hand sprinkles salt and pepper evenly. Crisp rhythmic impacts.

2.5-5s - Bread the Pork
Quick match cuts: the right hand presses the pork into flour, dips it into beaten egg in a wide shallow dish, then firmly coats it with coarse panko breadcrumbs. Show realistic egg dripping and breadcrumbs adhering to the surface.

5-7.5s - Fry
Long steel tongs in the right hand grip the breaded pork by its near edge, hand and tongs in frame until it is in clear amber oil in a deep pot, then they let go and withdraw. Small fast bubbles surround the cutlet's edge, no white foam, its outline always visible, as the crust turns golden brown and crispy. Warm cinematic lighting and detailed oil movement.

7.5-9.5s - Slice
The right hand's tongs lay the fried tonkatsu on a wooden board. The left fingertips steady it, the right hand, now on the handle of a sharp knife, presses down through it in visible strokes, front to back, into 5 even strips with gaps showing. The crispy crust cracks at each stroke, revealing juicy white pork with gentle steam escaping.

9.5-12s - Simmer Dashi & Onion
Thin half-moon onion slices, not rings, simmer half submerged in clear amber dashi a fingertip deep inside a shallow pan. Small bubbles rise along the pan edge while the onions become translucent. The left hand moves chopsticks through the broth, and the onions move with them.

12-14s - Add Tonkatsu
The right hand slides a wide flat spatula under the 5 strips, still in their cutlet shape with gaps showing, and eases them onto the simmering onions. The broth begins soaking into the crispy edges while steam rises.

14-16.5s - Pour Egg
The left hand tilts the small white bowl at the top of frame and pours beaten egg over the tonkatsu and onions in a thin translucent ribbon. It runs into the gaps between the 5 strips and begins setting around the hot edges, the strip tops still showing.

16.5-19s - Set the Egg
Close-up of the same egg coagulating over low heat, no whole yolks, no separate whites. Edges become soft and golden while the center remains glossy and slightly runny. The right hand nudges the pan handle once and a ripple crosses the center. No stirring.

19-21s - Prepare Rice
The right hand spoons a generous mound of steaming Japanese short-grain rice from a rice pot with a paddle into the empty blue-and-white donburi bowl. The rice looks fluffy and slightly glossy.

21-24s - Assemble
The left hand tilts the pan by its handle, handle in frame, and the right hand's spatula eases the egg and the same 5 strips onto the rice, still sliced. The egg settles naturally in a soft wave while dashi lightly absorbs into the rice.

24-26s - Final Close-Up
The bowl rests on a wooden counter. The left hand lays 3 fresh mitsuba sprigs on the glossy egg, and each one dents it slightly. Slow cinematic push-in, the bowl filling more than half the frame.

26-30s - Hero Reveal
The same blue-and-white ceramic bowl on the same wooden counter, filling more than half the frame. Golden egg runs between the 5 crispy strips, their tops showing, over glossy rice, topped with the mitsuba. Steam rises as the camera arcs about 35 degrees around the bowl. The right hand brings chopsticks in and lifts one strip, soft egg stretching off it and grains falling. The film ends in the middle of this lift, with the camera still moving. No held final shot.

AUDIO

Bright 1980s-inspired Japanese city-pop instrumental, 110-120 BPM, with subtle koto and light chime percussion. Synchronize realistic ASMR cooking sounds: mallet impacts, knife slicing, frying sizzle, bubbling dashi, chopsticks, egg pouring, steam, and a soft ceramic clink.

End with one delicate wind-chime tone during the final lift.
