Camera first, hard requirement: low camera at duckling eye level, ankle height to the goose, 35mm, moving on every beat and never locked off. Vertical 9:16.

MAP, never mirrored: a narrow dirt path runs from the bottom-right of frame away to the top-right. A chilli bush and then a lake fill the left side. PIP stands on the left of the path by the bush, body turned to screen-right. GUS comes down the path from the top-right, stops at PIP's right side and faces screen-left, looking down at him. The lake is always behind PIP on screen-left.

Look: premium feature-film 3D animation, appealing stylised proportions, individually groomed down, golden-hour light, one consistent light state. No dialogue, no text, no logos.

Cast: image 1 is PIP, a grapefruit-sized charcoal-grey duckling with a messy black tuft, cream face, big glossy brown eyes, thick dark eyebrows, small orange bill. Image 2 is GUS, a tall white goose three times PIP's height, long S-curve neck, droopy half-lidded eyes, bushy black eyebrows, long orange bill.

Props: the bush holds exactly 5 glossy red chillies. PIP has no hands: he only ever holds a chilli in his bill.

COLOUR STATES, stated per beat: GREY means true sheet colours. RED means the head is salmon-red and steaming.

0:00 to 0:03. PIP RED from the first frame. Close-up, his face half the frame height, facing screen-right. A chilli stem hangs from his bill and he slurps it in like spaghetti. The red climbs from neck to crown like a thermometer. His head inflates in two rubbery pulses, eyes bulge, down stands on end, and two jets of steam shoot from the sides of his head and rock him back one step.

0:03 to 0:06. Slow footsteps. PIP's eyes slide up to the top-right. Cut to his POV through a 200mm long lens: far up the path GUS strolls towards camera, compressed by the lens, wobbling in the heat. Cut back: PIP gulps, shuts his eyes and forces out one long exhale. On screen the red drains down from his crown like a blind being lowered and his head deflates with a small squeak. PIP GREY.

0:06 to 0:09. PIP GREY, GUS GREY. GUS's huge orange feet stop beside PIP and the camera tilts up the long neck to his bored face at the top of frame. PIP stretches up, plucks one chilli off the bush by its stem with his bill and holds it up towards GUS, his eyes on the middle distance. 4 chillies stay on the bush. One sly eyebrow raise.

0:09 to 0:12. PIP GREY, GUS GREY. GUS lowers his neck in a slow arc, looks at the chilli and at PIP, sniffs, and takes it from PIP's bill with his own. He swallows. A lump travels down the whole length of his neck in a visible bulge while the music stops dead. He smirks down at PIP, slowly raising one eyebrow.

0:12 to 0:15. Payoff, close-up on GUS, face filling a third of the frame, looking at screen-left. GUS only changes: the red rises up his neck from the base like a thermometer and reaches his head. His droopy eyes snap wide, his head inflates, and a column of steam erupts from his open bill straight up and out of the top of frame.

0:15 to 0:18. Wide and low, PIP large in the foreground at the bottom-left, facing camera. Behind him GUS bolts towards screen-left, flapping, feet kicking up dirt, and belly-flops into the lake. The water erupts in a tall splash and a hiss of steam. The spray falls on PIP and darkens his fluff in wet spots. He keeps his poker face, then one small puff of steam escapes the side of his head and he blinks. The film ends with the spray still falling and GUS still thrashing. No held final shot.

Sound: orchestral comedy score that stops dead for the swallow, one small ding when the red reaches the top of each head, cartoon slurp, steam jets, footsteps, the splash. No speech.
