Create a ultra-realistic live-action revenge-comedy scene inside a Seoul subway station. Natural handheld camera movement, cold fluorescent lighting, authentic subway ambience, realistic physical interactions, fast-paced action, and spontaneous facial expressions. The scene should feel like a real Korean action-comedy film, not animation or a video game.

CHARACTER: A Korean woman in her 20s with a short black bob, sunglasses resting on her head, a fitted crop top, high-waisted blue jeans, black boots, and a brown shoulder bag. She holds an iced takeaway coffee and her smartphone while walking down the subway platform.

ACTION SEQUENCE:

0–4 seconds: A Korean man with messy dark hair featuring blonde tips, wearing a dark-green bomber jacket and black pants, suddenly slaps her across the face as he passes her and laughs mockingly. Her smartphone flies out of her hand, hits the tiled floor, and slides several feet away. She stumbles, catches herself against the handrail, and stares at him in disbelief. He turns around, points at her, and laughs even harder.

4–7 seconds: She slowly turns toward him, her expression changing from shock to cold anger. Without saying a word, she lifts her iced coffee and suddenly throws the entire drink directly into his face. Coffee splashes across his hair, jacket, and face, with ice cubes scattering onto the platform. His laughter immediately stops. He stands frozen, blinking in disbelief as coffee drips from his chin.

7–13 seconds: He angrily steps toward her, but she grabs the front of his bomber jacket, pivots, and uses a fast, exaggerated but physically convincing action-comedy throw to send him tumbling backward into a large metal rubbish bin beside a pillar. His legs briefly stick out over the rim as the bin rocks violently. He looks up in complete shock.

13–17 seconds: She walks over calmly, looks down at him, and says in a firm, icy voice: “Don't f* with me.” She grabs the lid and slams it shut. The metal lid CLANGS loudly. The bin rattles as he struggles inside, then goes completely still.

17–20 seconds: She picks up her phone, checks the screen, brushes off her jeans, and walks away without looking back. Behind her, the rubbish-bin lid slowly lifts an inch as the man tries to escape, then drops shut again with a final metallic CLANG.

SOUND DESIGN: Authentic Seoul subway announcements in the background, footsteps, phone hitting tile, the man's mocking laughter, a wet coffee splash, shoes scraping the floor, a heavy metallic bin impact, and the final lid slam. Dialogue must be clear, natural, and synchronized with the characters' mouths. No background music overpowering the action.

VISUAL REQUIREMENTS: Maintain consistent faces, hairstyles, outfits, and location throughout. Show the phone falling clearly before the revenge begins. The coffee must visibly hit his face before she throws him into the bin. Make the entire throw readable in one continuous shot, with believable momentum and a comedic landing. The lid must close completely over him. Non-gory action, realistic skin texture, natural movement, restrained cinematic color grading, and authentic live-action footage. No supernatural powers, no excessive slow motion, no cartoon physics, and no scene transitions that skip the key actions.
