Create an ultra-realistic live-action Korean revenge-comedy scene inside a Seoul subway station. Natural handheld camera movement, cold fluorescent lighting, authentic subway ambience, realistic physical interactions, fast-paced action, and expressive facial reactions. The scene should feel like a real Korean action-comedy film.

ACTION SEQUENCE:

0–4 seconds: The woman walks along the subway platform with her dog, happily eating popcorn. The man sneaks up behind her and suddenly sprays a mouthful of water onto the back of her head. She jolts in surprise, while her dog barks at him. He bursts out laughing.

4–7 seconds: She turns around angrily, demanding to know what his problem is. He mocks her and smacks the popcorn box out of her hands, scattering popcorn across the platform. Her dog barks furiously as she stares at him in disbelief.

7–10 seconds: An intense argument begins. He points at her face and laughs arrogantly. She wipes the water from her hair, slowly takes a bottle of water from her bag, and gives him a cold, confident smirk.

10–13 seconds: She takes a mouthful of water and suddenly sprays it directly into his face. Water splashes across his hair and jacket. His laughter stops instantly as he stands frozen, blinking in disbelief.

13–17 seconds: Furious, he lunges toward her. She dodges, grabs his jacket, pivots, and sends him tumbling backward into a large metal rubbish bin beside a pillar. The bin rocks violently as he lands inside, his legs sticking out comically.

17–20 seconds: She slams the bin lid shut with a loud metallic CLANG. Looking down at him, she says coldly, “Next time, pick on someone your own size.” Her dog barks triumphantly beside her.

20–23 seconds: She picks up her dog's leash, brushes off her jeans, and calmly walks away with her dog as nearby commuters stare in disbelief. Behind her, the rubbish-bin lid rattles as the man struggles to escape.

SOUND DESIGN: Subway announcements, footsteps, dog barking, water spraying, popcorn scattering, heated dialogue, mocking laughter, shoes scraping, a heavy metallic impact, and the final bin-lid slam. Dialogue must be natural and synchronized with the characters' mouths.

VISUAL REQUIREMENTS: Maintain consistent faces, outfits, dog appearance, and location. Clearly show the man spraying water from his mouth, knocking away the popcorn, her water-spray revenge, and the complete comedic throw into the rubbish bin. Keep the action readable with believable momentum, realistic water splashes, and spontaneous reactions.

STYLE: Photorealistic live-action, Korean action-comedy, cinematic handheld camera, natural skin texture, realistic physics, expressive reactions, fast-paced revenge, non-gory slapstick, no cartoon effects, no subtitles, no text overlays, and no watermark.
