20-second vertical 9:16 photoreal phone video, handheld smartphone with harsh direct on-camera flash at 3am in the same dark crimson red-velvet lounge. Black curtains, orange Halloween string lights, glowing carved pumpkins on wooden crates, a black speaker thumping, a green EXIT sign in the back, sagging fake cobwebs. Raw party footage, punchy flash, deep black shadows, slight motion blur, phone grain. Hard cuts roughly every 1.5 seconds, wild party camera: beat-bounce, whip pans, crash zooms, Dutch tilts, 360 spins, one overhead, one floor-level shot.

Cast: the same small skeleton crew, never more than five in frame. They're real-looking, slightly yellowed bone skeletons: Sunglasses (crooked shades, backwards cap), Hawaiian (open floral shirt), Bow-tie (bow tie only), Witch-hat (slipping witch hat, one sneaker) and Chain (gold chain sliding through its ribs). Clothes are worn badly, and every face is a deadpan hanging jaw with empty eye sockets. Tiny cigarettes sit in their teeth, with smoke leaking from their eye sockets and nose holes. They hold red plastic cups and shot glasses, and every cup stays a separate object.

0–1.5s: Crash zoom on Hawaiian, who plays its own ribcage like a xylophone with two drumsticks to the beat, cigarette bouncing in its teeth.
1.5–3s: Whip pan to Sunglasses, who blows smoke and the whole puff comes out of its ear holes instead. It pauses, confused, then keeps dancing.
3–4.5s: Low angle as Chain does the limbo under a broomstick, its spine bending way too far and folding flat like a toy. It pops back up and sips.
4.5–6s: Dutch tilt as Witch-hat fills a cup and pours it into its skull through the eye socket; the drink pours straight out of its jaw into Bow-tie's cup below. Bow-tie drinks it.
6–7.5s: Beat-bounce wide on a bone tug-of-war: two skeletons pull one skeleton's arm until it detaches, and both fall back onto the sofa.
7.5–9s: Close-up as the detached arm gives a lazy thumbs-up from the floor.
9–10.5s: Overhead shot of three skeletons doing a conga line. The middle one's pelvis falls off and keeps walking in the line by itself.
10.5–12s: Floor-level shot of a skull rolling across the floor like a bowling ball, still wearing the sunglasses, knocking over five empty cups like pins. A headless body raises both arms in celebration.

12–13.5s: Whip pan as the headless Sunglasses body gropes around and screws a carved pumpkin on as its head. It keeps dancing proudly while the pumpkin glows.
13.5–15s: 360 spin around Bow-tie, who does a breakdance head-spin that unscrews its skull. The body keeps spinning without it.
15–16.5s: Crash zoom on two skeletons, who toast with shot glasses so hard their hand bones swap and stick. They keep drinking with each other's hands.
16.5–18s: Beat-bounce as the whole crew of five does the Macarena perfectly in sync, except Witch-hat, whose hip bone pops off on the hip-shake.
18–20s: Final punch-in on pumpkin-head Sunglasses leaning into the lens. Smoke pours out of the carved pumpkin's eyes and mouth, and the real skull is tucked under its arm, chewing a cigarette. Deadpan stare, then a hard cut to black.

Style: real phone party footage, direct flash, red velvet, orange Halloween lights. No cinematic grade, no teal, no lasers, no plywood, no cartoon or claymation look, no gore, no flesh, no blood, no morphing, no extra limbs, no text, no subtitles, no watermark.
