These prompts ran in order and the later ones use reference images: the sheets, frames and stills made by the earlier image prompts. Make those first, then upload them with each later prompt where it says image 1, @Image1 and so on. The heading above each prompt names the tool and format it ran with.

package

Reference binding: image 1 is TARA's character sheet (keep her face, braids with red ribbons, chrome-yellow raincoat, navy frock, red sandals and the paper boat exactly); image 2 is the STREET plate (keep the tenement lane, balconies, laundry lines, the tea stall with its hanging lantern, the black-and-yellow taxi, the flooded street). Ignore the sheet layout and its labels.

One single production package board for an original animated short painted in thick oil, laid out as a clean pre-production document on a dark charcoal background, 16:9, four clearly separated panels. Every picture in the panels is built from thick raised impasto oil paint: visible rhythmic, swirling, directional brush strokes that follow the forms, ridges catching the light, palette-knife texture; deep cobalt, ultramarine and teal blues against chrome yellow, warm ochre and touches of vermilion. Never smooth CGI, never photographic, never flat cartoon.

PANEL 1 (left column) CAST: TARA, a 9-year-old Indian girl: deep brown skin, round face, big dark eyes, two short braids tied with red ribbons, chrome-yellow raincoat with the hood down and wooden toggle buttons, navy-blue frock, red rubber sandals. Shown as a three-quarter full-body view plus a head-and-shoulders close-up, both in thick impasto.

Short white panel titles only (CAST, SET, FLOOR PLAN, PROP) and the name TARA. No other text anywhere; the taxi plate is blank.

Reference binding: image 1 is the production package (cast, set, floor plan, prop); image 2 is TARA's character sheet (face, braids with red ribbons, raincoat). Keep her face and wardrobe exactly; ignore panel layouts and labels.

Opening frame, vertical 9:16, a painting: the whole image is built from thick raised impasto oil paint, every surface made of visible rhythmic, swirling, directional brush strokes that follow the forms, ridges catching the light, palette-knife texture; deep cobalt, ultramarine and teal blues against chrome yellow, warm ochre and touches of vermilion. Never smooth CGI, never photographic, never flat cartoon. Her face is painted with the same thick strokes as the street.

Light, one state: blue monsoon dusk; the tea-stall lantern on the right glows warm; slanting rain streaks.

Composition: camera low at water level in front of her, MEDIUM CLOSE shot. TARA crouches at the edge of the flooded lane on frame RIGHT, three-quarter view facing screen-LEFT, her head and shoulders filling the right half of the frame, her face about a quarter of the frame height, in the middle third. She holds ONE small white folded paper boat (blue-ruled notebook paper) in both hands just above the water, in the lower third, looking down at it with a curious, careful face. Deep brown skin, round face, big dark eyes, two short braids tied with red ribbons, chrome-yellow raincoat with the hood down and wooden toggle buttons, a glimpse of navy frock. Behind her on the left, the flooded lane recedes: ONE black-and-yellow taxi parked on the left with a blank plate, balconies and laundry lines, swirling reflections in the water; the tea stall with its ONE glowing lantern behind her on the right; swirling indigo and teal storm clouds in the top quarter.

No text, no letters, no numbers anywhere; the taxi plate is blank.

kf_end_t2

Reference binding: image 1 is a real frame from this shot, cropped: keep it EXACTLY: the same 9-year-old girl (same child face, deep brown skin, round cheeks, big dark eyes, two short braids with red ribbons, chrome-yellow raincoat with wooden toggles), the same pose looking up to screen-left, the same lane, lantern, framing and palette. Image 2 is TARA's character sheet for identity.

Repaint it as a crisp, finished frame with only these changes:
1. Her mouth opens into a wide, delighted, open smile; her eyes stay looking up to screen-left, bright and happy.
2. ONE soft, round patch of warm golden light, about the size of her head, falls on her face only. NO rays, NO beams, NO shafts, NO haze, NO fog; the lane behind her stays deep cobalt and teal dusk exactly as dark as now.
3. Short thick diagonal painted rain streaks across the whole frame.
4. Every surface, including her face and hands, is thick raised impasto oil paint with visible swirling directional brush strokes and palette-knife ridges, sharp and detailed; never smooth digital illustration, never airbrushed, never a 3D render.
Vertical 9:16. She stays a 9-year-old child. No text, no letters, no numbers. No boat in this frame.

scene_v3

Reference binding: image 1 is the FIRST FRAME: start exactly on it. Image 2 is the LAST FRAME: end exactly on it (same face, smile, framing, light and paint). Image 3 is the PRODUCTION PACKAGE (cast, set, floor plan, prop). Image 4 is TARA's character sheet for identity. Ignore panel layouts and labels.

Create an exactly 12-second vertical 9:16 animated painting: ONE continuous shot, no cuts, no dissolves, no transitions.

Camera, hard requirement: low at water level in front of her, on the same axis for the whole shot: it starts on the MEDIUM CLOSE of image 1 and makes one slow, steady, constant-speed push-in, already moving from the first second, that lands exactly on the CLOSE-UP of image 2 at 12 seconds. No pan away, no orbit, no reverse angle. The camera never leaves her.

Style, hard requirement for every frame: a living oil painting of thick raised impasto, every surface made of visible rhythmic, swirling, directional brush strokes and palette-knife ridges; deep cobalt, ultramarine and teal blues against chrome yellow, warm ochre and touches of vermilion. The strokes themselves move. Short, thick, diagonal painted rain streaks are visible across the whole frame from 0.5 s to the end. Her face, hands and raincoat stay thick painted strokes in every frame, as in image 2. Never smooth CGI, never airbrushed, never fog or haze, never photographic, never a 3D render. Rain and ripple highlights are pale teal and ochre, never pure white: the paper boat is the ONLY pure-white object in frame.

Light: blue monsoon dusk the whole time; the tea-stall lantern glows warm and steady. The only change: from 8 s a soft round patch of warm golden light, about the size of her head, settles on her face only, as in image 2. NO rays, NO beams, NO light shafts, NO haze; the lane, houses and sky stay deep cobalt and teal, exactly as dark as the first frame.

CONTINUITY LOCK (every frame):
- TARA, a 9-year-old child: deep brown skin, round face, big dark eyes, two short braids tied with red ribbons, chrome-yellow raincoat with the hood down and wooden toggle buttons, navy frock, red rubber sandals. She stays crouched at the water's edge on frame RIGHT, three-quarter view facing screen-left.
- THE PAPER BOAT: ONE small white folded paper boat of blue-ruled notebook paper: LOW and WIDE, longer than it is tall, a flat hull with two short peaks, a thin dark painted outline, about one sixth of the frame width. It is rigid: its shape never changes. Its long side always faces the camera; it never rotates, never turns its bow or stern toward the camera, never tilts, never stands up, never spins, never breaks apart. It sits flat on the water with only a soft blurred reflection, never a mirror-image twin. There is only ever one boat, and no white paper bits anywhere.

- The lane: ONE black-and-yellow taxi parked on the left with a blank plate, balconies and laundry lines, the tea stall with ONE hanging lantern behind her on the right, ankle-deep flood water. Nothing moves except rain, water, clouds, laundry and the boat on the current.

0-2s, HOOK: the frame holds still as a painting for half a second; then the brush strokes start to flow: the painted rain begins to fall, the ripples begin to swirl around her sandals, the laundry stirs. <rain begins on tin roofs> <water lapping>
2-8s, TURN: TARA lowers the paper boat flat onto the water and opens her fingers. The current carries it SIDEWAYS across the foreground water, straight toward screen-LEFT, parallel to the bottom edge of the frame, at the same distance from the camera, side-on the whole way, gliding flat in a straight line, staying the same size; it slides out of frame at the LEFT edge by 7 s, still whole. It never travels away into the depth of the lane. The swirling strokes move around it; the boat itself never spins. She watches it go, her eyes following it screen-left, never at camera.  <rain> <distant thunder rolling>
8-12s, BUTTON: she lifts her face and looks up above the camera to screen-left; the soft warm patch of gold settles on her face; her curious face opens into a wide, delighted smile, ending exactly on image 2. Delighted, not scared. <the rain softens>

Do not show any text, letters, numbers or logos; the taxi plate stays blank. Do not add a second boat, other people or animals. Do not change her face, age, braids, ribbons or raincoat. No cut, no dissolve, no flash, no white-out.

Audio: natural sound only: rain on tin roofs and water, a soft splash, distant thunder. No music, no voice.
