These prompts ran in order and the later ones use reference images: the sheets, frames and stills made by the earlier image prompts. Make those first, then upload them with each later prompt where it says image 1, @Image1 and so on. The heading above each prompt names the tool and format it ran with.

Reference 1: MEI YAN character sheet, scabbards edited out | model `nano_banana_2` | engine higgsfield | 16:9 2K still changes: same woman, same face, hairpin, robe, sash, wraps and sandals, same layout, same background. No text.

Reference 2: TIAN HE character sheet, scabbards edited out | model `nano_banana_2` | engine higgsfield | 16:9 2K still

Edit this character reference sheet and change only one thing: remove every scabbard and sheath. In every view he holds ONE bare drawn straight sword with a polished brass crossguard and a short rust-red tassel on the pommel in his right hand, blade bare steel, and his left hand is empty and open. Nothing else changes: same man, same face, hair, robe, rust-red sash and wraps, shoes, same layout, same background. No text.

The film: one Seedance 2.5 omni_reference generation (Higgsfield), 26 s, timecoded choreography | model `seedance_2_5` | engine higgsfield | 9:16 720p native | 26 s gen; edit drops 18.75-18.96 s

Reference binding: @Image1 is MEI YAN and @Image2 is TIAN HE; take their faces, hair and costumes from the sheets. Ignore the sheet layout. Both swords are drawn bare steel from the first frame; there is no scabbard, sheath or second weapon anywhere in the film.

Create an ultra-realistic, 26-second vertical 9:16 wuxia action sequence, one continuous story with fast cinematic cuts, at golden dusk on the curved grey-tiled rooftops of a mountain monastery: tiers of sweeping roofs and upturned eaves stacked one above another, a stone courtyard far below, pines and mist in the valley, a white-walled bell tower rising beside the roofs, the low orange sun on the horizon. The light stays the same golden dusk from the first frame to the last; the sky is never grey, overcast or night. Frame for vertical: stack the action in depth and height, roofs above and below the fighters, faces large in close shots. No top-down shots.

MEI YAN, the undefeated sword-keeper, late fifties, silver-white topknot with its wooden pin, faded indigo-black robe with a grey sash. TIAN HE, the orphan she raised, early twenties, black hair half tied up, off-white linen robe with a rust-red sash. There are exactly two swords in the whole film: MEI YAN's one plain iron-guard sword in her right hand, and TIAN HE's one brass-guard sword with a short rust-red tassel in his right hand. Both left hands stay empty. Each sword stays in its owner's hand from start to finish. Screen direction: TIAN HE starts on the left and MEI YAN on the right; they switch sides only when he flips over her (0:12 to 0:14), and they circle back to him left, her right, before the blade lock. Every leap starts with a visible push-off and ends with a visible landing.

0:00 to 0:02: Close on MEI YAN standing still on the ridge of the highest roof, robe snapping in the wind, her bare sword held low in her right hand, eyes closed. Far down the roofs behind her, TIAN HE sprints toward her.
0:02 to 0:04: Low tracking shot beside TIAN HE as he runs up the roof slope, his bare brass-guard sword in his right hand, blade forward, his left hand empty; tiles crack and skitter loose under each footfall and tumble off the eave.
0:04 to 0:06: He pushes off the last eave, flies the gap in one fast arc and lands on her ridge three metres away, knees bent, tiles bursting under his feet. Her eyes open.
0:06 to 0:08: First clash: their bare blades meet with a ringing crack and a short spray of small hot steel sparks; the camera whips around them.
0:08 to 0:10: Five fast strikes along the narrow ridge, a few steel sparks at each contact, both balancing on the tiles, robes whipping.
0:10 to 0:12: MEI YAN sweeps low at his legs; he back-flips over her blade and lands on his feet on the ridge.
0:12 to 0:14: TIAN HE runs three steps straight up the white wall of the bell tower, pushes off it, flips backward over her head and lands on the ridge behind her, sword still in his right hand.
0:14 to 0:16: She spins and blocks his strike behind her back without looking; a short shower of steel sparks; they circle each other on the ridge until he is on the left and she is on the right again.

0:16 to 0:19: He drives her back along the ridge with a storm of strikes until her heel reaches the end of the roof; a loosened tile slides off the eave beside her foot and falls away. The camera stays on the two fighters.
0:19 to 0:21: Tight side-on two-shot, faces large: their blades lock at chest height, his jaw clenched with effort, not smiling; her eyes soften as she feels his strength.
0:21 to 0:23: Tight side-on two-shot: MEI YAN turns her blade aside and lowers it, opening her guard; his sword point stops a hand's width from her collar, his arm and his right hand on the brass hilt fully visible; they hold, perfectly still, only the wind moving her robe.
0:23 to 0:26: Close two-shot, both faces large: MEI YAN smiles, proud and warm, lowers her sword point to the tiles and bows her head to him; TIAN HE's eyes go wide, stunned, not smiling, his sword still held out. The light stays golden dusk to the last frame.

Visual style: photorealistic wuxia epic, anamorphic film look, golden dusk light from the low sun, warm rim light on hair and blades, realistic motion blur, sparks as small real hot steel sparks (never firework bursts), real cloth weight, detailed faces. Natural sound only: wind, cracking tiles, steel ringing, footfalls, breath; no music, no dialogue, no subtitles, no text on screen.
