Reference binding: @Image1 is the line-up sheet, left to right RUSHER, CAPTAIN, BOX, SUPPORT. Take their faces, hair, clothes and the orange toy blasters. Ignore the sheet layout, poses and plain backdrop.

Camera first: low handheld at knee height, 28mm, always moving, quick whip pans between characters. Vertical 9:16.

STYLE: premium 3D animated sitcom, chunky appealing character proportions, big readable faces, soft bright indoor light. No text, no logos, no screens, no game UI. Leave the top fifth of frame clear of faces.

SET: an indoor foam-dart arena built from stacked plain brown cardboard boxes, flat cardboard sheets on the floor. At the far end, three players in plain orange vests crouch behind a cardboard wall, and behind them a tall pole holds one big plain red flag on one thick white rope. Blasters are bright orange foam-dart toys: a short fat tube, a round dart drum on top, a chunky handle.

CAST, from the reference sheet, plain green vests. RUSHER, tall, wild hair, headband. CAPTAIN, glasses, big gestures, a plain clipboard. BOX, seen only as two eyes through a slot in one cardboard box. SUPPORT, the smallest, a calm round-faced girl, holds a roll of heart stickers and has a blaster on her back.

0:00 to 0:03. RUSHER, already at full sprint in the first frame, runs away from camera towards the wall, blaster up, yelling with joy. The three orange vests pop up, all aiming at him, and a wall of soft blue foam darts bounces off him. He flops onto his back on the cardboard floor, arms out, darts stuck all over his vest, groaning dramatically.

0:03 to 0:05. Whip pan to CAPTAIN, three-quarter view, face a third of the frame, eyes on RUSHER at screen-right, never the lens. He jabs the clipboard that way, shouting: "I said WAIT!" Behind him, BOX's two eyes slowly blink.

0:05 to 0:07. Whip pan to the path. SUPPORT, back to camera, walks calmly away from us towards RUSHER, not hurrying, darts sailing past on both sides. CAPTAIN, off screen: "Was that the plan?!"

0:07 to 0:09. SUPPORT already kneels at RUSHER's shoulder, close to camera, facing us, the wall and pole straight behind. Her hand presses one heart sticker on RUSHER's forehead, and RUSHER bounces up to sitting, grinning.

0:09 to 0:12. One continuous shot, no edit, same camera, SUPPORT large in the foreground. Eyes still on RUSHER, she tips the blaster, still strapped to her back, over one shoulder and fires one dart behind her at the pole. It hits the white rope, which snaps. The red flag slides down and drapes over the three orange vests at its foot, and they freeze under it, beaten.

0:12 to 0:15. CAPTAIN's earlier setup, closer, face at least a third of frame height, clipboard held up at his chin. Eyes screen-right, he jabs the clipboard the same way, shouting at nobody: "That's what I..." SUPPORT steps in from screen-right and presses one heart sticker onto the front of his clipboard, right under his chin. He freezes mid-word, mouth open, eyes wide, sliding down to the heart and then to SUPPORT. The film ends on the box behind him finally shuffling one inch.

Sound: bouncy comedy score with a quick stop for the sticker. Foam dart thwips, cardboard thumps, sneaker squeaks. Comic excited voices with clear lip-sync on CAPTAIN only.
