This prompt ran with one still, used as both the start frame and the end frame, so the loop closes on itself. Save it and set it as both.

Reference binding: the start image and the end image are the same frame. The film opens on it and closes on it.

Camera first: locked first-person POV from the driver's seat of an unbranded sports car, both hands resting on the steering wheel, a softly glowing amber-red gauge cluster in the lower third of the frame. One continuous fast forward tracking shot, no edit, motion blur on the road edges only, landmarks crisp, streaking light trails, tiny corrections of the hands on the wheel. Vertical 9:16.

The start image and the end image are the same frame: the road under the galaxy. The film begins and ends on it.

0:00 to 0:03. A wet black highway at night under an enormous blue spiral galaxy filling the sky, a hillside city of coloured lights to the left, the road lights streaking past. The car speeds towards a short tunnel ahead.

0:03 to 0:07. A half-second white flash as the car passes through the tunnel, and it comes out onto a causeway across a shallow glowing sea, turquoise waves lit from within, one huge whale silhouette arcing above the waves under a violet sky.

0:07 to 0:11. A half-second white flash through a second tunnel, and the car comes out into a canyon of tall crystal towers glowing ice blue and orange from inside, the road curving between them.

0:11 to 0:15. A half-second white flash through a third tunnel, and the car comes out onto the same wet black highway under the same blue spiral galaxy, the hillside city to the left, the hands and gauges exactly as in the first frame. The film ends on that frame.

Style: cinematic night grade, cobalt blue and magenta, anamorphic flares, rich glow. No text, no logos, no brand marks on the car.

Sound: steady low engine hum, rushing wind, a whoosh at each tunnel, one soft sustained synth pad that never resolves, so the loop has no seam.
