Create a 30-second, 1080p ultra-realistic documentary-style personal home video showing an ordinary summer day in the life of a young Indian man. The footage should feel spontaneous, intimate, imperfect, and genuinely observed rather than performed.
MAIN SUBJECT
The same young Indian man in his early 20s throughout the entire video.
Naturally handsome, realistic skin texture, minimal styling, relaxed expression, slightly tired but peaceful eyes.
He has naturally messy medium-length dark hair with a few strands falling over his forehead and very subtle stubble.
He wears a loose washed-black T-shirt, relaxed olive-beige trousers, worn white sneakers, and a simple silver wristwatch.
Keep his face, identity, body proportions, hairstyle, clothing, watch, and overall appearance completely consistent from beginning to end.
LOCATION
A quiet older residential neighborhood in Mumbai during a warm summer afternoon.

Narrow concrete alleys, low-rise homes, rooftop terraces, external staircases, potted plants, laundry lines, parked bicycles, utility poles, overhead wires, mature trees, concrete walls, small residential courtyards, and distant city sounds.
The neighborhood should feel authentic and lived-in.
No crowds, tourist attractions, advertisements, recognizable brands, or commercial activity.
CAMERA / VISUAL STYLE
Authentic casual personal-video footage captured with an older consumer digital camera.
Handheld camera operated by a friend walking nearby.
Natural camera shake, imperfect framing, occasional autofocus changes, slight exposure adjustments when moving between sunlight and shade, soft image detail, mild motion blur, subtle digital noise, slightly muted colors, imperfect white balance, and natural compression.
The camera operator occasionally reacts a little late, cuts off part of the subject, or briefly loses focus.
No stabilization, gimbal movement, drone shots, cinematic camera choreography, dramatic lighting, slow motion, modern commercial color grading, or polished cinematography.
The footage should feel like someone simply decided to record his friend during an ordinary day.

00:00–00:05 — MORNING ROOFTOP
He sits casually on a small rooftop beside an old plastic chair.
A cold bottled drink rests beside him.
He looks quietly across the neighborhood while the wind moves his hair and T-shirt.
He takes a sip, notices something happening in the distance, and smiles faintly.
He briefly notices the camera and gives a subtle nod before looking away.
The camera takes a moment to find focus on his face.

00:05–00:10 — WALKING THROUGH THE ALLEY
He gets up and walks downstairs into the neighborhood.

He walks casually through a narrow concrete alley with his hands in his pockets.
He passes parked bicycles, potted plants, laundry hanging from balconies, and old residential walls.
The camera follows several steps behind him.
He occasionally looks back toward the camera but never deliberately poses.
His footsteps remain naturally synchronized with his movement.

00:10–00:14 — SMALL EVERYDAY MOMENT
He notices an old basketball resting near a wall.
He picks it up, casually bounces it twice, then takes a simple shot toward a nearby hoop.
The shot misses.
He laughs quietly, shakes his head, and leaves the ball where he found it.
The camera briefly loses focus during the movement and recovers naturally.
No exaggerated athletic movement.

00:14–00:19 — LOCAL SHOP
He walks to a tiny neighborhood shop and buys a cold drink.
He exchanges a few natural words with the shopkeeper but the conversation is not clearly audible.
He steps outside, opens the bottle, takes a drink, and leans casually against the wall.
He watches bicycles and pedestrians passing in the distance.
The camera remains handheld and slightly imperfect.

00:19–00:23 — SUMMER RAIN
A sudden summer shower begins.
He looks toward the sky with mild surprise.
Instead of immediately running for shelter, he smiles and slowly walks into the rain.
The rain becomes heavier.
His hair becomes wet and falls naturally across his forehead.
He eventually starts running down the alley, laughing genuinely.

He briefly spins around while running, then continues toward a covered walkway.
His clothes become visibly damp.
Maintain realistic rain interaction, wet fabric, wet hair, reflections, and foot contact with the ground.

00:23–00:27 — QUIET MOMENT
He reaches the covered walkway and catches his breath.
Rain falls heavily behind him.
He wipes water from his forehead and looks quietly toward the street.
For a moment, everything becomes still.
He notices the camera again.
He gives a small genuine smile, not a posed expression.

00:27–00:30 — WALKING AWAY
The rain becomes lighter.
He walks away down the wet residential lane.
The camera follows from behind.
Reflections shimmer across the concrete.
He turns his head once, gives a tiny wave toward the camera, smiles, and continues walking.
The camera remains pointed toward the empty street for a brief moment.
At approximately 00:29, the recording abruptly cuts to black mid-motion.
No fade-out.

PHYSICAL REALISM
Maintain believable real-world physics throughout.
Hands, fingers, feet, clothing, hair, rain, bottle, basketball, and background objects must behave naturally.
No extra fingers, fused hands, duplicated limbs, distorted anatomy, floating objects, teleportation, disappearing objects, or sudden transformations.
The bottle remains a separate physical object and never intersects with his face.
The basketball behaves naturally and remains where it lands.
Parked bicycles and background objects remain stationary unless physically moved.

His feet remain properly connected to the ground while walking and running.
Keep the environment and subject consistent between shots.

AUDIO
Natural environmental audio only.
Footsteps on concrete, distant traffic, birds, leaves moving in the wind, bicycles, faint neighborhood conversations, shop sounds, bottle opening, basketball bouncing, rain hitting concrete, water dripping from rooftops, and subtle camera-handling noise.
No music.
No narration.
No soundtrack.
No artificial sound effects.
No spoken dialogue is necessary.

FINAL FEEL
The result should feel like a forgotten personal recording of an ordinary summer day.
Not a commercial.
Not a fashion film.
Not a music video.
Not a professional cinematic production.
The emotional appeal should come from small human moments: sitting alone, wandering through familiar streets, missing a basketball shot, drinking something cold, getting caught in the rain, laughing, and walking home.
Quiet, masculine, youthful, nostalgic, slightly melancholic, warm, spontaneous, and deeply human.
Prioritize natural behavior, consistent identity, believable physics, imperfect handheld framing, authentic environmental details, and the feeling that the camera happened to be there.
