1990s American gangster movie texture, authentic film grain, cinematic camera movement, mostly close-ups, slight handheld feel, warm streetlights mixed with natural night lighting, realistic shadows, low-saturation retro color grading, thick low-frequency ambient sound, old-school 80s rap playing inside the car, subtle reverb, authentic in-car soundstage.

0.0–2.0 seconds
At the edge of a nighttime park, inside a parked vintage American sedan, a close-up on a lean Black American man with gold teeth, a red gang bandana, thick gold chain, and extensive tattoos on his face and body—his expression is funny yet cool and a bit intimidating. He leans back in the driver's seat, slowly smoking, staring straight at the camera, with retro 80s hip-hop playing in the car, thick bass, authentic atmosphere.

2.0–4.0 seconds

A little boy on a skateboard slides into frame, does a small jump next to the car window, and lands while looking coolly at the man. The shot maintains a cinematic mid-close-up feel, as the man turns his head to look at him, a smirk on his lips.

4.0–6.0 seconds
The man chuckles low, English dialogue: “Watch this, little homie.”
After saying it, he presses a button inside the car, and the shot quickly cuts to a three-quarters side view of the car body.

6.0–8.0 seconds
The entire car suddenly bounces up like a hydraulic lowrider, shooting about 3 meters into the air with all four wheels off the ground—the motion is exaggerated but physically realistic—before slamming back down onto all fours, the body shaking, suspension rebounding, light smoke drifting, music uninterrupted.

8.0–10.0 seconds
The boy stumbles back in shock, staring at the man. The man laughs heartily, keeps smoking, English dialogue: “That damn skateboard can never do that, man.”
The boy turns and runs off, the man leans back in the car still laughing, the shot lingers on his smug yet absurd expression, with a 90s gangster comedy movie ending vibe.

Style modifiers:
90s cinema, urban comedy crime vibe, realistic smoke, detailed car interior, authentic park background, cinematic close-up, film grain, dramatic but funny, realistic body motion, perfect timing, believable physics, expressive face, strong bass audio atmosphere
