The Puddle That Became a Sea

15 s · widescreen 16:9 · unknown model · 1,890 characters

Copy the prompt below into unknown model or any video model. It is open source. Remix it, rewrite it, make it yours.

Want the next one? Message @irushi.ai: https://ig.me/m/irushi.ai

No reference image: this prompt ran on its own.

Gentle pastoral animation with soft rounded character designs, lush hand painted landscape backgrounds, warm diffused sunlight, wind through grass and hair. Ink wash painting aesthetic with volumetric mist and vermillion accents. Magical realism, peaceful wonder building to overwhelming joy, hard cuts only, no fade, no dissolve, no morph transition. 15s.

Shot 1: Wide shot of an elderly Indian grandfather sitting alone on a weathered wooden bench in a quiet village courtyard at golden hour, holding a small handmade paper boat in his wrinkled hands, looking at it with a gentle sad smile. A brass chai glass sits beside him, steam curling upward.

Cut to Shot 2: Close-up of his hands carefully placing the paper boat into a shallow puddle of rainwater on the stone ground, the water reflects painted clouds and golden light.

Cut to Shot 3: The paper boat begins to glow softly, the puddle expands impossibly into a vast painted ocean, the courtyard walls dissolve into hand painted horizons, the grandfather watches in quiet wonder.

Cut to Shot 4: Medium shot as dozens of glowing paper boats appear on the painted ocean, each one carrying a tiny flickering flame, drifting outward from where his boat floats, ink wash mist swirling between them.

Cut to Shot 5: The camera pulls up slowly as the ocean of paper boats stretches to the horizon, each flame reflecting in the water like stars, the grandfather now standing at the edge of this impossible ocean, his white kurta caught by the wind, arms at his sides, face tilted up toward a sky full of painted lanterns rising.

Cut to Shot 6: Final close-up of the original paper boat, now far out on the glowing water, a single vermillion flower petal lands on it from above. The grandfather's hand enters frame and gently touches the brass chai glass beside him. He is back on his bench. The puddle is small again. But he is smiling.